HOUSTON, TEXAS

HOUSTON, ALSO KNOWN AS THE BAYOU CITY, IS LOCATED NEAR THE GULF OF MEXICO ON THE COASTAL PRAIRIE OF GALVESTON BAY IN EASTERN TEXAS. FOR ITS CITY POPULATION, IT IS THE LARGEST IN THE SOUTHERN AND SOUTHWESTERN UNITED STATES, AND THE FOURTH LARGEST IN THE NATION.

Houston is the fourth most populous city in the United States. Texas' largest entertainment complex, the Bayou Place, is located in Houston. Finished in 1997, Bayou Place is the cornerstone of urban renewal in the 1990s, costing in excess of $23 million, with the massive size of 150,000 sf. Yet, Bayou Place is only one part of a revitalization and diversification project for a city that reached depression levels just a decade ago. The Port of Houston serves 200 steamship lines while it connects Houston to 250 ports worldwide. A major international and corporate business center, 15 Fortune 500 companies are located there.

Houston has the fourth-largest airport system in the United States and the sixth-largest in the world, with approximately 2,000 flights entering the city daily. The city has two major international airports and several other regional air facilities. The George Bush Intercontinental Airport (on the north side of the city) and the William P. Hobby Airport (located southeast of downtown) provide passenger service by all major international and domestic carriers. The METRO bus system offers express transportation to most Houston sites of interest from both airports.

The south Houston area is located along I-45, nicknamed the "Gulf Freeway." This area developed around rice farms, orange and fig orchards. In the 1930s, oil field development allowed many residents to work in the Texas City area. Today, South Houston is one of the quickest expanding areas in the entire region.

The Port of Houston is now the second largest in the United States in tonnage moved; a major international port, its top cargoes (in terms of tonnage) include petroleum and petroleum products, chemicals, grain, fertilizer, plastics, iron, and steel. Medical research and health care have a considerable economic impact; the combined institutions of the Texas Medical Center constitute by far the largest single employer in the city. Engineering services, software production, aerospace research and development operations, and aerospace, electronics, and computer manufacturing are also economic strengths. The immense resources of petroleum, natural gas, sulfur, lime, salt, and water in the region have created one of the world's greatest concentrations of industries along the Houston Ship Channel. The area around the city is also important for rice, cotton, and cattle.

Home to the Astros baseball teams and the basketball team, the Rockets. Space Center Houston at the Johnson Space Center is a popular attraction offering educational programs and exhibits. A number of lakes, wildlife refuges, and Galveston Island beaches, as well as an arboretum in the city and Sam Houston National Forest to the north.
